

Reindeer

Reindeer (also known as caribou in North America) are the only deer species where both males and females sport antlers.

They inhabit tundra, woodland and mountain slopes in the Arctic and sub-Arctic, where they feed on lichens, mosses, herbs, ferns and grasses.

Reindeer may be one of the only mammals that can see in UV light, an adaptation to make food and predators easier to spot in the snow.